On the DIGNITY of the MIND.

A Philosopher of eminence discoursing upon the dignity of the human mind says, that nature did not regard man as a creature of a low and mean condition; but gave him life, and threw him upon this vicious world as into a vast and spacious amphitheatre, to view and examine all before him: She entered him spectator at once and actor in the scene; and a candidate for fame and immortality; who should not condescend to admire except what was magnificent; and who should breathe nothing but glory. It was therefore she planted in his soul a strong and an invincible passion for every thing that was great and divine; together with a noble disdain of meanness in himself, and contempt of it in all things.

A BURLESQUE on GENEALOGY.

FROM THE FARNON.

TWO men disputing one day upon their Genealogy, each of them pretended to be better than the other. "You cannot (says one) compare yourself to me, who am of a thousand times better use than you."—"You! (said the other) Had your father, like mine, the first post of the City?"—"The first post of the City (replied the first) was he governor?"—"No," answered he. "Was he judge?"—"No; not that yet."—"What was he then?" continued the first. "Gate-keeper (replied the second) is not that the first post of the City?"—"Yes (said the other) but mine preceded the first men of the province, he went before the dukes and peers, and before the marshals of France."—"In virtue of what office?"—"In virtue of his post," replied the other. "What was, then, that post?" says he. "He was a postillion (said the other.) If my father had taken care, we should have been rich, but he was a fool."—"I grant that to be true (said the other) and I see his office is necessary." "My father prevents that (said the son of the postillion) for before he was postillion he was a man of letters."—"What call you a man of letters? (replied the son of the gate-keeper) was he judge, advocate, or counsellor?"—"None of all those (said the postillion) he was runner to the post-office; call you not that a man of letters?"—"True (said the gate-keeper) but that does not prove the antiquity of your family; whereas I can trace mine farther back than five hundred years."—"And mine (replied the other) more than eight hundred."—"That's nothing (answered the gate-keeper) I can prove my family to have existed before the Deluge."—"And I mine from Adam," said the postillion. "And mine, before Adam," said the gate-keeper."—"You are in the right (replied the other) the proof is very easy; for before Adam there was no animals but brutes, and it is very certain that you are descended from them."

THE DESERTED VILLAGE. A POEM.
By Dr. GOLDSMITH, Author of the Hist. iv of Eng.

The MONKEY who had seen the World. See the Fable.

The MONKEY who had seen the Sequester'd occasion, broke his chain,
And sought his native woods again.

The hairy shew'd him prest,

A Monkey to reform the times,
Rejoic'd to visit foreign climes,

For men in distant regions roam
To bring politest manners home :

So forth he fares, all tair dyes ;
Misfortune serves to make us wise.

At length the reach'd our share was laid,
His powder'd back, above, below,

Poor Pug was caught to town convey'd,
Like hoary frost, or flinty snow ;

There said ; (bowed envy'd was his doom,
But all, with envy and desire,

Made captive in a lady's room !)
His flut'ring shoulder knot admire.

Proud as a lover of his chains,
Hear and improve he pertly cries,

He day by day her favor gains,
I come to make a nation wise ;

When'er the duty of the day,
Weigh your own worth ; support your

The toilette calls ; with mimic play place.

He twists her knots, he cracks her fans,
The next in rank to human race.

Like any other gentleman,
In cities long I pass'd my days,

In visits too his parts and wit,
Convers'd with men, and learn'd their

When jigs grew dull, were sure to hit,
wits ;

Proud with applause, he too's his mind
Their drests, their courtly manners see ;

In every country art refin'd,
Reform your state, and copy me,

Like Orpheus hunt with public zeal,
Seek ye to thrive ? In flattery deal,

To civilize the Monkey-veal ;
Your scorn, your hate, with that conceal, For vice is fitted to his parts.

Seem only to regard your friends.

But use them for your private ends,

Sin't not to rub the head of wit,

Be prompt to lie, whene'er 'tis fit

Bend all your force to spatter merit ;

Scandal is conversation's spirit ;

Bolax to every thing pretend,

And men your talents shall commend ;

I knew the great. Observe me right,

So shall you grow like man polite.

His spoke, and board. With running jaws,

The wondering circle grin'd applause.

Now, warm with malice, envy, spite,

Your most obliging friends they bite.

And fond to copy human ways.

Practise new mischiefs all their days.

Thus the dull lad, too tall for school,

With travel finishes the fool ;

Studious of every coxcomb's airs,

He drinks, gambles, drests, whores and fores.

O'erlooks with scorn all virtuous arts,

OF, COLUMBIA TRIUMPHANT.

A NEW SONG.

WHAT rapid'ous sounds salute our ears,
Gently dispersing gloomy fears

Of War's destructive scene?

Mantled on yonder silver cloud.

It was COLUMBIA cry'd aloud,

And Peace was all her theme.

Sound the immortal tramp of fame,

Let ev'ry note aloud proclaim,

An end to War's alarms:

Ye friendly Angels join your voice,

Altho' my Heroes no rejoice,

For their victorious arms.

In vain have haughty Chieftains strove

To seize the sacred Laurel Grove,

With thousands in their bands:

But see fair Virtue and her train,

Crowning my sons on yonder plain,

Where Freedom's temple stands.

To trample down the Olive Grove,
Whence ev'ry blessing spring:

But lo! yon rising spreading sail,
Driv'n beneath a peaceful gale,

Which the fair blessing brings.

'Twas thus COLUMBIA spoke and rose,

Th' avenger of fair FREEDOM'S woes,

Ambition's envy'd prize:

Soft on her sweet maternal breast,

She lull'd her darling Chief to rest,

And plac'd him in the Skies.

Now see the Goddess, see her rise!

Gleaming in the Western Skies,

A constellation Queen.

See the dazzling Crown she wears,

Grac'd with thirteen blazing Stars,

And wreaths of ever green.

ANECDOTE of a CLERGYMAN and PUBLICAN.

A Certain Clergyman being at a horse-race on Saturday afternoon, instead of being in his study, a droll Generus who kept an inn not far from the course, steps in and observing his Sermon

just began, from these words

"The righteous shall flourish like a green bay," wrote

"Horse," instead of "tree" at the end of the unfinished sentence. The Divine, on his return not perceiving it, very gravely went on and finish'd his Discourse by candle light, and next day read his People the text, viz

"The righteous shall flourish like a green bay-horse!" On which the astonished Parson stop'd short, and says

"Horse! horse! horse! it is

And I confess it is my own hand writing, my hearers

but it must be a mistake for which I most humbly request your pardon."

A merry Story of a GENTLEMAN's being cured of the TYPO, who fancied he had swallowed a COBLER.

A Young Gentleman of good sense and learning, and plentiful estate, had no other malady to complain of but the spleen, and soon found there could be nothing worse. Hereupon he came up from his seat, on the Borders of Wales, to Oxford, where he had been bred, in order for a cure. He seem'd well in body, and said he had no cause of trouble in mind; but still he complain'd, he was he knew not how, — Deep in the shags, — Hy'd to a violent degree, — Full of the glooms and dsmals! &c. By the Doctor's advice he retired to a town in the neighbourhood, where there was good air, not too much company, not too great a solitude, and where, after diverting himself with riding, and other exercises, he might conclude the day with a few friends, and a cheerful bottle, — by which he was for some time exceedingly reliev'd. — Opposite to his best apartment was a Cobler's stall, who work'd hard all day, and was often diverting himself and others with a merry song, or a ballad: The Gentleman was, for some time, mightily pleas'd with this; but, upon comparing this cheerful mechaick's condition with his own, came, by degrees, to envy him, and at last to hate him mortally. — In this temper he took some back rooms, next the gardens; but still the Idea of the happy Cobler haunted him till at last he fancied he was possess'd, and that the Cobler had got down his belly, where he lay poking with his awl, gnawing the leather, and beating furiously with his hammer.

In this distress consulting again his Physicians, he told them he had swallow'd a Cobler; upon which they declar'd him mad and gave him up, as incurable.

A young Student in physic, related to the Family where the Gentleman lodg'd was told in a visit, of this extraordinary case, and with much difficulty admitted to see the Patient, whom he found in an easy chair, groaning hideously, and turning from side to side, as the Cobler made a puncture, or contusion — He complain'd of an immoderate swelling, of brobbings, like blows &c. and of the stench of ale and tobacco.

At last he said, now pray Doctor, what do you think I am troubled with? The Doctor gravely answer'd, really, sir, I am inclined to believe you have swallow'd a Cobler. — A Cobler? (says the Patient) you have it! You have it! O the villain! The villain! Now I feel him pricking me: pricking you was sent from heaven for my deliverance! — But what can you do for me?—To night (says the Doctor) you shall take a composing draught, which will make both you and your Cobler easy, and to-morrow I'll visit you again.

That evening the Doctor privately sends for the Cobler, gives him a piece of money, and the promise of another, gives him all his instructions, and engages him heartily in the operation. The next morning he revisits his Patient, orders him to keep his bed till night, and then retires to an adjoining room, hung round with old tapestry, where he got all things ready. A very strong Emetic was sent in by the Apothecary; a large bathing tub, half fill'd with water, was set close by a closet, to which there was an opening thro' the hangings: The Doctor had furnish'd his pockets with some of the Cobler's tools and utensils, properly dispos'd; the family was let into the secret; a dim light was placed at the other end of the room; and the Cobler privately station'd behind the hangings. About ten at night the Patient was in form, took the emetic, and, after one or two plunges, the Doctor gravely fish'd in the tub of water, with a large ladle, and dro't up some ends, and hug's knittles: See here, says he, we are right! We are right! Come, one plunge more; and when he fishes up an awl, a ball of thread, and some wax: Again, Sir, again (continues the Doctor) and then brings up a hammer, a pairing knife, and two heel-pieces: Now, Sir, we are near him, shut your eyes close, and take one more hearty plunge. In his interval he lugs the Cobler from behind the hangings, douses him over head and ears in the tub, and then cries out, open your eyes, Sir, we have him; we have him! And whilst collecting the Cobler, just risen from the deluge, he severely reprimanded him for daring to get down a Gentleman's throat, and threatening him heartily, in case of a return; shew'd him at last the shortest way down stairs. The Patient was, for a while, astonish'd at his deliverance; but by degrees he compos'd himself, for there was no resisting demonstration. That night he took another composing draught, was well next morning, and the Doctor returned with fifty guineas to Oxford.

ANECDOTE of a CLERGYMAN and his CHORISTERS.

ONCE on a time a certain Divine gave out a Psalm to his Choristers, who attempted to set it to a new tune; but having made a blunder, the Clergyman, when he came to that part of the Litany, "Lord have mercy upon us miserable sinners," in his turn made another mistake, and read it as follows, "Lord have mercy upon us miserable SINGERS."
